

ROCKY MOUNTAIN PROJECT AREA SCENE OF SUMMER WORKSHOPS AND CONFERENCES

William D. Carlson, Ph.D., Dean, Nevada Southern University, discusses family life education with Mrs. Elizabeth S. Force, Associate Director of Education, the American Social Health Association, and Calvin H. Reed, Ph.D., Co-ordinator, Rocky Mountain Project, and Professor of Education, University of Nevada. Dr. Carlson presided at the opening session of the Nevada Family Life Conference held June 20 and 21 at Clark County Convention Hall in Las Vegas.

A series of family life education workshops was held in Nevada, New Mexico and Utah during the summer.

Sponsored by the American Social Health Association and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in cooperation with institutions of higher education, local committees, civic and state groups; these workshops were keyed to training school and community leadership as an integral part of the ASHA-NCPT Rocky Mountain Project in Family Life Education.

The Rocky Mountain Project, established a year ago, consists of pilot operations in Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah which are geared toward establishing a partnership between education and the wider surrounding community to which education must look for support.

The purpose of this Project is to make schools and community programs of family life stronger and better coordinated and, where such programs do not exist, to create them.

The Rocky Mountain area was chosen because it affords a variety of situations conducive to experimental approaches, has excellent PTA groups and other leadership, and because populations and number of communities are sufficiently low to be manageable.

PARENTS HUNGRY FOR KNOWLEDGE, NATIONAL CONFERENCE TOLD

Speaker Urges Clearer Definitions, Better Communications

"Parents are hungry for knowledge and for information that will enable them to keep their children emotionally stable, mentally healthy, and morally sound," stated Mrs. Clifford N. Jenkins, speaking before the American Social Health Association's joint meeting at the Annual Forum of the National Conference on Social Welfare in Atlantic City in June.

Urging better communication, Mrs. Jenkins, who is first vice-president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, deplored the "great gulf" between the researcher and the user of research. She said that there is need for a "middleman between the producer of knowledge and the consumer of knowledge."

She charted the complex task of being a good parent, stressing the need for parent and family life education "to help adults understand their own needs, attitudes and limitations and to develop more satisfying personal adjustments."

Mrs. Jenkins pointed out that "There are too few school systems giving young people adequate preparation for the gravest of human responsibilities—parenthood," concluding that "the splendid possibilities inherent in each individual will be realized only as we bring to the men and women who are now parents, and to the boys and girls who are the parents of the future, the knowledge and insights necessary to foster rich psycho-social development and productive living."

Highlights of other ASHA panelist's remarks before the National Conference will be presented in future issues of the News.

sistent efforts to improve the temporal as well as the spiritual welfare of his fellow man make him an excellent member of the Regional Committee," Heller said of his appointment. "We are indeed fortunate to have him as a chairman."

were held in Nevada, June 13-24, a leadership training institute in Utah, July 18-20, and a community leadership workshop in New Mexico, August 1-5. Mrs. Elizabeth S. Force, ASHA associate director of education, served as consultant and program participant for all of these.

First of the summer series was held in Nevada in cooperation with the Nevada State Department of Education.

The tri-part summer sessions, two conferences and one workshop, were held at the University of Nevada, and in the cities of Reno and Las Vegas.

Conferences were planned by Mrs. Force and Genevieve Pieretti, State Supervisor of Home Economics Education; and the workshop was under the supervision of Calvin H. Reed, associate professor of education; Dr. Marilyn J. Horn, director of home economics; and Dr. Patricia A. Triple, associate professor of home economics—all faculty members of the University of Nevada.

Theme of the conference, for which Mrs. Force gave the keynote address, was: "Competencies for Effective Family Living."

The Utah Leadership Training Institute, held at Utah State University, Logan, provided opportunities for individuals to obtain family life content appropriate to their needs, and to gain experience in group discussion.

Activities were planned and reviewed daily by Dr. Mildred I. Morgan, Florida State University, and Mrs. Force, co-directors of the Institute, in cooperation with Dean Dorothy Dyer and C. Jay Skidmore, Utah State family life experts, and Mrs. Roberta Hunt, Utah Project Consultant.

Methods and techniques of winning the cooperation of those who will be involved in the project were demonstrated. Skills were sharpened and heightened through frequent practice sessions. Participants were encouraged to learn how to help leadership emerge from groups which they will later be conducting.

The New Mexico Leadership Training Institute held at New Mexico University in Las Cruces worked to train leadership teams representing a cross-section of community responsibility. Special emphasis was placed on helping these teams, which include Indian representatives, to organize and conduct discussion groups for home and family life education in their own communities.

Clarence M. Hill, Director of Research, Santa Fe Department of Education, and a member of the Rocky Mountain Project Advisory Committee, served as consultant.

NATIONAL HEALTH COUNCIL PROJECT

A project to develop uniform accounting principles and definitions for national voluntary agencies has been launched by the National Health Council, according to an announcement made by Dr. James E. Perkins, president of the council. In the project, fifteen national voluntary agencies, including ASHA, will work under council auspices.

Dr. Perkins pointed out that it is another manifestation of the willingness of the national voluntary agencies to work for a common concern.
